

ANDREW RANNELLS

Bio

Andrew Rannells is a GRAMMY® Award-winning and two-time Tony® Award-nominated stage, film and television actor, best known for his role as Elijah Krantz in the HBO series “Girls,” opposite Lena Dunham, which earned him a Critics Choice Award nomination for Guest Performer in a Comedy Series.

He recently reunited with Lena Dunham in her Netflix comedy series, “Too Much.” Other film and TV credits include “Black Monday” (Critics Choice Awards nomination); “Welcome to Chippendales;” “A Simple Favor” and the sequel, “Another Simple Favor”; “I Don’t Understand You,” opposite Nick Kroll; Netflix’s “The Prom” and “The Boys in the Band,” among others.

He made his television directorial debut, directing an episode of Prime Video’s “Modern Love,” helming an episode based on a personal essay he wrote for the NYT column. Upcoming, Rannells will star in Jim Rash’s film “Miss You, Love You,” opposite Allison Janney, and will co-host “The Great American Baking Show” for Roku.